

Wimpy Kid Game Show

It's way easier than you might think to set up and play a TV-style trivia game that provides some memory-teasing fun.

PREP

What you'll need:

- Some clear wall space
- Printout (or handwritten index cards) of trivia questions and answers (see below for samples)
- Sticky notes (a variety of colors would be nice, but is not necessary)
- Large sheet of construction paper or poster board

...oh, and of course some questions. See below for some samples.

PLAY

Divide the group into two teams, each of which should appoint an official “spokesperson” who delivers the final answer on behalf of the group. Write the trivia questions on sticky notes and arrange them in categories on a hanging sheet of paper or poster board. Clearly mark the category headings and display point values. Cards should be placed in ascending order from top to bottom, in vertical columns under the headings. The board should resemble a “Jeopardy!” board. Flip a coin to decide which team chooses the opening question. Let the team with the first raised hand get the first shot at answering that question, and let the other team try to answer it if the first team gets it wrong. As teams answer questions correctly, they get to keep the sticky notes. At the end, tally up the final score by adding the point values on the sticky notes.

(Tip: You can write the answers right on the back of the sticky notes—if they won't show through.)
