

FUN & GAMES, QUICK & EASY

NAME TAG NONSENSE

This is a riff off on a common icebreaking activity. Guests are given name tags to wear on their backs or foreheads—somewhere that they can't see—and have to ask other guests questions to try to determine who they are. The twist here is that all the names should be of characters in the Wimpy Kid universe. Of course if you want to make things extra challenging, you can include animals, like Sweetie the dog (Dog Days), or even inanimate things, like chicken pox (The Third Wheel).

NAME THAT BOOK

Gather all the books in the series, and select a reader to choose a passage and read it to the group (all of whom should have their eyes closed during the reading). Who can name that book first? Keep switching readers for more fun.

CHEESE TOUCH TAG

If you think about it, the “Cheese Touch” in Diary of a Wimpy Kid is really just a never-ending game of tag. Cut out the piece of cheese on the next page and place it on a black top outside or on a gymnasium floor. Have one person volunteer to be “it” and touch the cheese to start the round. From here, this person can pass along the “Cheese Touch” once a person is tagged.

Pro Tip: You can avoid getting the “Cheese Touch” by crossing your fingers before the person tags you!
